Your apprenticeship at ELA

Electronics technicians specialising in energy and building technology plan and install electrotechnical systems such as electrical power supply systems in buildings. For example, you install fuses and connections for washing machines, cookers, building control systems and data networks. You commission control and regulation equipment for heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems. To do this, you create control programmes, define parameters, measure electrical variables and test the systems. You install reception and broadband communication systems and telecommunications networks. During maintenance work, you check the electrical safety equipment, determine the causes of malfunctions and eliminate faults.
